RUSSIA AND REFORM.

Whatever cause be assigned to the alarming mutiny on the "Kniaz Smolensk Tavrichesky," the occurrence is a grave sign of the rising discontent in the Russian services. The Black Sea Squadron has long been a target for revolutionary aims. Since the St. Petersburg outbreaks we have heard again and again of the trial by court-martial of mutinous sailors, of the discovery of seditious literature in naval barracks, on battleships, and even in the houses of commissioned officers, and of demonstrations ending in conflict and arrest on the part of sailors and dockyard hands. The news of the latest mutiny explains much that was inexplicable three weeks ago. No doubt the mutiny was perhaps caused in part by the injuries received by the "Oron" and the "Nicolai II.," both the fact that the "Sejvan" and the "Apraksin" had not lost a single officer when they struck is eloquent of the condition of their crews. The crews of this division were largely drawn from the Black Sea division, which is recruited from the Southern circle where Anti-Jewish demonstrations, Socialist riots, and Anarchist outrages are more frequent, even in peace time, than in any other part of Russia, and where industrial progress has created a hungry and angry proletariat. Meantime the appetite of the Russian reformer has for many months past been growing commensurate with the tide of Russian disaster in the Far East. The worst defeat of all has supervened: the annihilation and capture of Russia's last available fleet in being, Russia's last naval base, a fleet which cost her in hard cash close on twenty-eight millions sterling to build, equip, provision, and coal to the Korean coast and immolation. The effect of this latest disaster on Russia's millions at home has not been long in revealing itself. Practically without exception the demand has been raised both in the Russian Press and in the country that the Government should daily no longer with the people whose formulated request is for the convocation of a popular assembly, elective and representative, free under Imperial charter, to deliberate in open council on the nation's needs, free to advise the nation's rulers, and guarantee honorably a definite voice in matters of State with a view to preventing any repetition of disastrous measures like that which has resulted in Russia's repeated humiliation on land and sea in the Far East. The ascent in Russia has still millions of loyal supporters. But the very name bureaucracy has come to spell another word for the Russian people, and they are determined to have no more of his policies, oppression and colossal mismanagement. There is still time, think moderate men in Russia, for the Emperor to take corrected measurements. Let him, they declare, throw over the hated bureaucracy with a will, and the country, if not the clique, will be solidly with him; let him take the country at large into his confidence while there is yet time; let him give the effect of Russia's military and naval disaster on his tens of millions of ungrateful subjects, and to the practically unanimous and daily increasing demand of his subject peoples for the stoppage of the war, give Russia the opportunity she so urgently needs for reorganisation, retraining, national recuperation, and industrial and agricultural development at home and all they feel may yet be well. If not—if the present disastrous war be persisted in with "prestige" as the main excuse for its prolongation—should atrocity elect irreversibly to stand or fall with an officer, frequently corrupt, notoriously incapable, and consistently ungrateful bureaucracy, against which the united forces of popular opinion in Russia are plainly determined to wage war to the knife, then, say competent Russians themselves, so much the worse for autocracy.

The bulk of Russians to-day are as little ripe for revolution on a grand scale as they are for a full fledged Western Constitution. But they seek the powers that be in Russia to read a right, mark, and inwardly digest the lessons of consistent military and naval disaster, to stop this war, and turn diligent attention to the many pressing problems at home awaiting solution, and to refrain from driving Russia's exasperated millions precisely into an open rebellion, whose ultimate object would inevitably become the radical abolition of the existing form of relationship.

BULLETIN DE LA BOURSE

(Avec des notes de détail)

Après avoir décliné presque calmement le marché a pris peu à peu de l'activité et a été en hausse sur toute la ligne avec un chiffre d'affaires considérable. Le marché de nos denrées s'est nettement amélioré, à moins de complications politiques qui ne sont pas à prévoir.

Les Etablissements ont été vendus entre 13 1/2 et 13 1/4 et les Trésors à 13 1/4.

En hausse la Bourse Nationale de 25 1/2 à 26 3/4, l'action Crédit Foncier de 508 à 510 et l'action de 512 à 516 1/2, la Land Bank de 9 1/2 à 9 1/4, la Daira de 28 1/8 à 28 1/4, l'Anglo-Américain de 5 1/4 à 5 3/8, l'Alexandria Water de 15 1/8 à 15 1/4, la Delta Light de 12 3/4 à 12 1/2, les Privileges Tramways de 15 1/2 à 15 1/4, et la Kumbia Railway de 17 1/2 à 17 1/4.

Le mouvement est tout aussi soutenu pour les petites valeurs qu'au sein de l'investissement de 1 9/32 à 1 11/32, la Delta Land de 3 1/2 à 3 1/4, les Ombas de 1 1/8 à 1 1/4, les Batares de 2 1/2 à 2 3/4, la Société de 8 1/2 à 8 3/4. Les tendances ont été en hausse et l'on attendait ce que la hausse s'accroisse.

MATTERS OF MOMENT.

THE PITH OF THE PRESS COMMENTS.

THE MOROCCAN CRISIS.

"TIMES."

The analysis of the French Note on the Morocco question which our Paris Correspondent sends us to-day shows that the French Government have taken up a very clear and straightforward attitude on the subject of the proposed conference. She will not be a party to a conference with such unlimited powers as the vague language of the Sultan's invitation might cover, and was doubtless designed to cover. She has entered into agreement with this country and with Spain in regard to the introduction of reforms in Morocco, and before she takes part in a conference she wants some guarantee that it will not be asked to arbitrate to itself a right of revising those arrangements. As the "Times" observe, when people negotiate in good faith they must speak clearly. France is negotiating in good faith, and accordingly she begins to insist on being able to solve the difficulty with Germany which is the only solid obstacle to a satisfactory settlement of the whole Morocco question.

"MORNING POST."

In the matter of national organisation and training Germany has drifted into a position of pre-eminence on the European Continent such as was held at the close of the 16th century by Spain, and at the close of the 17th and again of the 18th century by France. Each of those Powers in turn sought to supplement its great Continental position by crushing England. France policy seems to be moving on closely analogous lines, and our duty is, regardless of the representations of our views which may be given to the German public, to warn our countrymen, while there is time, that it is Great Britain to preserve her independence, to say nothing of her Empire, she must prepare for a renewal, in more difficult conditions of the struggle which closed the 16th, the 17th, and the 18th centuries.

"DAILY NEWS."

If France made a mistake at the beginning in not acquiescing Germany with the Anglo-French agreement, she has abundantly repaid the oversight. M. Delcassé has disappeared as the result of his attitude, and France has adopted an entirely conciliatory tone. Nor must it be forgotten that Germany's action in the matter leaves something to be desired. She should not protest when she should have protested—that is, when the incident which wounded her pride occurred—but a year later, when the course of events in the Far East had entirely altered the position. France, if a minister motive is not to be attributed to this fact, it will be necessary for Germany now to give the world some proof that she does not desire to keep the difficulty open any more than France.

It is certainly desirable that the work of keeping the peace should be delegated to some one, and Germany as well as the rest of Europe would profit from a regenerated Germany. Germany has been a legitimate success so far in enforcing her title to be considered. It remains now for her to show that it is not mere claims in this affair that she desires, but a certain thundery atmosphere—not good relations, but strained relations.

"CHRONICLE."

There is no necessary quarrel between the Germans and the English unless we hold it wrong for Germany to do that which we do not do for a thousand years. In the memory of living people the German boy has become a man and is now a giant. While there is no reason why Englishmen should fear this giant, there is every reason for trying to understand him.

"GLOBE."

We must make it clear both to France and to the Sultan, who will communicate it to his Royal Brother and Friend the Kaiser, that no circumstances will the conference be permitted to disintegrate the peace of the Anglo-French entente. If Morocco, why not Egypt? We do not desire to wake up some fine morning and discover that the German Eagle has taken the Khedive under his wing, and is proposing an Anglo-German conference based on the "status quo ante" Tel el-Kebir.

"TRAVELER."

When people speak without arriere-pensée they must speak clearly and not in disguise. Morocco clearly lies the Powers to a conference. That is all right; but Morocco acted at the instigation of Germany. If it were to be argued that Germany is for nothing in it, then the purpose of the conference and let things take their course, it would not be sincere. In this whole affair there is a Franco-German difficulty and nothing else. It is consequently logical and salutary first of all to solve this difficulty. . . . German diplomacy has affirmed its desire to apply a really conciliatory spirit in the negotiations opened by M. Rouvier. The moment is at hand when she will have the opportunity of

ARMY AND NAVY.

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.)

London, June 29.

Major R. A. Dickinson, Royal Dublin Fusiliers, the new Governor of the Blue Nile Province, is a very smart officer whose connection with the Khedive's forces dates back to the end of 1898. Though no fault of his he has not had an opportunity of seeing much active service, but is well known as one possessed of much ability and is great at organisation.

Captain C. H. Townsend, East Surrey Regiment, who lately took up the appointment of A.A.G. of the Egyptian Army, donated the fee in March, 1899, in time to share in the Nile Expedition of that year and the final hunt after the Khedive, for which he received the medal with clasp. It is exactly thirteen years since he was appointed to a commission in the "Young Buffs," and he got his company in January, 1901. No fewer than seven officers of the East Surrey are serving in extra-regimental employment in Africa.

Lieutenant R. St. G. Lowther, R.P.A., serving with the 43rd Battery at Woolwich, has been posted to a battery in the Khedive's army, which he has been ordered to do at an early date. Lieutenant Lowther was a subaltern of twelve months' service when the Boer war commenced, and with the 8th Battery R.P.A. he went to the front and was severely wounded in action (mentioned in despatches, medal with clasp).

Captain G. V. F. Steward, Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers, on promotion to that rank, has been transferred from the 2nd Battalion at Cairo to the 1st Battalion at Londonderry.

"FERRI PASSES."

The "Petit Parisien" announces that Lord Lansdowne assured M. Cambon of the complete identity of the views of the British Government with those expressed in M. Rouvier's Note.

"LOKALANZEIGER" (BRUSSELS).

The numerous advantages which France, even if a conference were held, wishes to reserve for herself hardly accord with the Sultan of Morocco's absolutely negative attitude towards the French reform proposals, and therefore unless M. Rouvier changes his mind Germany will have to be careful to safeguard her interests by continuing direct negotiations at Fez.

A STANDARD TIME FOR INDIA.

After much correspondence with commercial bodies and other representative organisations, the Government of India have ordered the introduction of a standard time, with effect from July 1, 1905. The railways (other than small lines, and those which are inconveniently and in all telegraph offices (the convenient), and also in Burma. The local time in the Peninsula varies considerably. At 12 o'clock noon, Greenwich mean time, it is 4.51 p.m. in Bombay, 5.13 in Madras, 5.53 in Calcutta. On most of the Indian railways the confusion inseparable from frequent changes of time zone has been avoided by the adoption of Madras time. The standard now to be introduced is nine minutes in advance of the "railway time," as it is called in all parts of India, and is 5.43 in Calcutta, 5.43 in Madras, 5.43 in Bombay, being the local time of the 82.30 degree of longitude. The standard for Burma is to be exactly an hour earlier—viz., 4.43 hours in advance of Greenwich and five minutes earlier than Rangoon local time. In inland India it has been found that it is probable that generally follow Rangoon time but the great seaports of Calcutta, Bombay, and Karachi have followed the local time of their respective longitudes. The Government of India do not prescribe the new standard for these and other places following local time, as it is deemed desirable to leave the ultimate decision to local opinion. But it is intimated that, if a general desire to adopt the new standard is evidenced, Government will be prepared to support the change and to co-act. On most of the Indian railways, therefore, there will, ere long, be a uniform time throughout India exactly 45 hours in advance of Greenwich, while that of Burma will be 64 hours in advance.

KITCHENER'S SUPREME GRACE.

From Bandolier, father and idol of decadent poets, to Lord Kitchener, is a far cry. But if, as Bandolier said, energy is the supreme luxury grace, Lord Kitchener's report on the administration of the Indian Army should serve for an example to those official investigators who, in their desire to write finely, affect a fantastic whirl of words. The Butler Committee presented the nation with a document which might have come from the pen of a sickly apostle of the "precious." Lord Kitchener puts what he has to say in the simplest words and sentences, and the manner is so potent as the effect is triumphant. "I would certainly not continue a rotten system because I was afraid to stretch out my hand to take a sound one." "Our Indian military administration has been framed mainly to meet peace requirements, and the consideration that for an army exists for what has been over looked." "Office became papered with more or less unnecessary verbiage." That is how Kitchener ought to, and how the Butler Committee ought to have done it. Energy is the supreme literary grace—for administrators as well as Bandoliers.

"EVERY INCH A KING."

King Oscar's speech to the Swedish Riksdag is in every respect worthy of a constitutional monarch. His Majesty spoke, with all the dignity of absolute sincerity, the charge that he has, by a breach of the Constitution on his part, given cause for the step which his Norwegian subjects have seen fit to take. He believes that the Union is "important for the safety of the Scandinavian nation," and he regards the action of the Storting as an encroachment on his own rights. Nevertheless, "it is not intended to reject injudiciously by force," and the King consents to the recommendation of the Government that powers be obtained from the Riksdag to arrange the matter with the Norwegian Storting. This is a consent which does honor to his Majesty, although it is one which has been neither sought nor given without deep emotion. Norway being irrevocably bent upon separation, she could only be prevented from having her way by the completion of a fratricidal struggle. There will be no such calamity; but, for the fact that there will not, both Norway and Sweden have largely to thank the venerable Sovereign.

BRYTHREAN COTTON.

Like England, Italy is much occupied with the project of colonial cotton-growing. The manufacturers of Northern Italy some time ago began to organise cotton-planting experiments in Erythraea, and these have resulted so well that the question as to whether or not Erythraea may be regarded as a profitable cotton-growing country has been permanently decided in the affirmative. Maritime the exports of the colony continue to grow steadily.

MANUFACTURERS TAKE THOUGHT.

One of the best pieces of commercial news that has been published for "an eternity or two" is the announcement that a Manufacturers' Association for Great Britain is at last really in course of formation. It will be modelled on the lines of the associations which assist business enterprise in Canada and the United States, and will set itself a number of useful objects. One of them—perhaps the most immediately practical and prospectively advantageous of the lot—is the appointment of correspondents in all parts of the world to report on openings for trade and on local changes and conditions. If the British manufacturer will read, mark, and learn the teachings of such reports, his progress will be cleared away. For he will no longer persist in sending goods of a particular pattern into places which urgently require another pattern and will be content with none other. The association should have been founded years ago, but it is not yet too late for it to have an immense effect upon British industry.

QUITE FRANK.

The word seems to have gone forth, from the high places of the Willamstonian, that the German Press is to spare no pains to cajole (or to bully, as expediency may dictate) France into renouncing her friendship with England. All sorts of personages are being set up to point out that France has all to gain and nothing to lose, by becoming the obedient humble servant of William II. There is Prince Henckel von Donnersmarck and Professor Schiemann (has not German history been made as well as written, by German professors?), and there are others. But, though the voices are many, their language is identical. So far, indeed, have they gone in the way of perfect (the "Times" correspondent in Paris calls it "brutal") frankness that they admit with absolute optimism, that France is a mere pretext. It is Erythraea that is aimed at all through—England, from whom France has never gained anything, and never will gain anything. In short, Germany is making a tremendous effort to ruin the Anglo-French friendship, which she has succeeded in doing. Upon the answer to that question depends, in all probability, the course of the world's history for many years to come. Forwarmed, therefore, the parties it primarily concerns should be forewarned.

ITALY AND HER NAVY.

The Government of Signor Fortis has won a remarkable victory in the Italian Chamber, on the question of the augmentation of the Navy. Admiral Miraballo had proved the necessity of following the example of the English Admiralty, and discarding old and worthless ships, and replacing them by modern vessels. This, of course, meant the expenditure of large sums of money, and the Finance Minister declared that the flourishing state of the finances would enable him to provide the necessary funds. Signor Fortis, for his part, announced the intention of devoting the surplus to the better protection of the country, and though the augmentation of the Navy was violently opposed by the Socialists and the Extreme Left, a vote of confidence in the Ministry was carried by two hundred and seventy-two votes to eighty-five. This is largely in excess of the usual Government majority, and it is particularly satisfactory, as it shows that when the safety of the country is involved, all but the Socialists will unite to strengthen the hands of a Ministry with which they do not see eye to eye in most matters. The Deputy Minister that Italy is in a very peculiar and embarrassing position. She is a Mediterranean Power, and all her interests lie on the shores of the inland sea; but, at the same time, she is still a member of the Triple Alliance, and, therefore, is bound to Germany, with one of whose present policies she is, by the nature of things, greatly at variance. Above all things, it is necessary for her to possess a strong fleet, and it is of good omen for peace that the Chamber has so emphatically recognised the duty of providing it.

A NOVEL GAME OF WHIST.

At Dalwich last week, on a wide lawn encircled by forest trees, dreams of wickered came true, and Kings and Queens of the world high revel through the early hours of the summer evening. The spectacle opened by the entry of the cards in slow time—the Aces, held in white, leading their suits into the lists. Four of a kind they were with regard to staidness and grace. Black and gold were the dresses of the Spades, black and silver of the Clubs, while the Hearts were arrayed in red and gold, and the Diamonds in red and silver. The familiar features and costumes of the four Kings and Queens and Knaves distinguished the royal party—and there were all the other cards, green wondrous big, with pretty heads above and dainty feet below.

The Knaves with the Aces, and the Kings with their Queens, were dancing a royal minuet when the clash of a cymbal recalled them to the business of the right. Then, to quick music, there was a sudden shuffling of the cards, a cut, and those behind took precedence of those before, and then, one by one, the cards were dealt, dancing to their places on the four sides of the lawn, and there sorted, each hand taking its position with its back turned towards the others. Then, as the cards were played, they advanced in turn to the centre of the field, and the three which were taken, curtailing obedience to the winning card, marched away behind the victor. In the final game the winning side revolted, and declared the losers as three discomfited tricks were transferred across the illuminated lawn.
